

Jeremiah 33:8

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And I will cleanse them from all their iniquity, whereby they have sinned against me; and I will pardon all their iniquities, whereby they have sinned, and whereby they have transgressed against me.

Analysis

I will cleanse them from all their iniquity (וְטִהַרְתִּים מִכָּל־עֲוֹנָם, vetihartim mikol-avonam)—The priestly cleansing verb taher (used for ritual purification) applies to moral guilt (avon, iniquity/guilt). God acts as both Judge and Priest, cleansing what He condemned. This impossible juxtaposition resolves only at the cross, where Christ became sin-offering to cleanse sin.

I will pardon all their iniquities (וְסָלַחְתִּי לְכָל־עֲוֹנוֹתֵיהֶם, vesalachti lekhol-avonoteihem)—The verb salach (pardon, forgive) is used exclusively of God in the Old Testament—only YHWH can truly forgive. The threefold description—'sinned against me,' 'sinned,' 'transgressed against me'—covers all categories of rebellion. God promises total amnesty, the essence of the New Covenant: 'I will remember their sin no more' (Jeremiah 31:34).

Historical Context

Jeremiah 31:31-34 (the New Covenant promise) provides the theological foundation for this verse. Written to a people drowning in guilt from covenant-breaking, idolatry, and injustice, this promise of divine cleansing and pardon was revolutionary. It anticipates Ezekiel 36:25-27 (clean water, new heart, God's Spirit) and finds fulfillment in Christ's blood that cleanses all sin (1 John 1:7-9).

Study Questions

1. How does God's promise to both cleanse and pardon address the dual problem of sin's pollution and guilt?
2. What does it mean that only God can 'pardon' (salach)—why can't we forgive ourselves or earn forgiveness?
3. How does this Old Testament promise of total cleansing prepare you to receive the New Covenant in Christ's blood?
