

Jeremiah 38:19

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And Zedekiah the king said unto Jeremiah, I am afraid of the Jews that are fallen to the Chaldeans, lest they deliver me into their hand, and they mock me.

Analysis

---

I am afraid of the Jews that are fallen to the Chaldeans—Zedekiah's confession reveals his character: he feared defectors' mockery more than God's judgment. The verb yare (יָרֵא, "to fear") shows misplaced reverence. He should have feared (yare) Yahweh (Proverbs 9:10), but instead he feared (yare) public humiliation.

Lest they deliver me into their hand, and they mock me—The verb alal (אָלַל, "to mock/abuse") suggests more than verbal taunting—possibly physical mistreatment. Zedekiah's pride couldn't bear the thought of Judean defectors saying "I told you so." This fear of shame proved fatal: his actual fate (eyes gouged out after watching his sons executed, 39:6-7) was infinitely worse than any mockery he imagined. By fearing man rather than God, he guaranteed the very disaster he sought to avoid.

Historical Context

Some Jews had already surrendered to Babylon, following Jeremiah's advice (38:2). These defectors represented a humiliating rebuke to Zedekiah's resistance policy. In honor-shame cultures like ancient Judah, a king's loss of face before subjects—especially "traitors"—was considered unbearable.

Study Questions

1. How does the fear of man prove to be a snare (Proverbs 29:25) in Zedekiah's decision?
2. What imagined consequences do we allow to prevent obedience to God's clear commands?
3. How might Zedekiah's story have differed if he had feared God more than public opinion?
