

Jeremiah 39:7

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Moreover he put out Zedekiah's eyes, and bound him with chains, to carry him to Babylon.

Analysis

Moreover he put out Zedekiah's eyes (שִׁנֵּי צְדָקִיהוּ עִוָּר, einei tzidqiyyahu iwver)—After forcing Zedekiah to witness his sons' execution, Nebuchadnezzar blinded him, making that horror his final visual memory. This fulfilled Ezekiel's prophecy: 'he shall not see it with his eyes' (Ezekiel 12:13)—Zedekiah would go to Babylon but never see it. The verb iwver (עִוָּר) means to gouge out, blind.

And bound him with chains (נְחַשְׁבָּיִם, nechushayyim)—Bronze fetters, dual form suggesting double chains or shackles on both hands and feet. The king who refused to see God's truth through Jeremiah now literally cannot see. He who would not be bound by covenant is bound by bronze. He who rejected prophetic light ends in physical and spiritual darkness—a terrifying picture of judgment.

Historical Context

Blinding was a common punishment for rebel vassal kings in the ancient Near East, serving multiple purposes: preventing future military leadership, creating a living warning to others, and inflicting maximum humiliation on royal captives. Archaeological evidence includes Assyrian reliefs depicting the blinding of captured kings. The bronze chains indicate Zedekiah's status as a high-value prisoner rather than execution.

Study Questions

1. How does Zedekiah's physical blindness picture the spiritual blindness that led to his downfall?
2. What 'chains' result from refusing to walk in God's liberating truth?
3. How does Jesus open the eyes of the blind (literally and spiritually) and proclaim freedom to captives (Luke 4:18)?
