

Jeremiah 46:24

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

The daughter of Egypt shall be confounded; she shall be delivered into the hand of the people of the north.

Analysis

The daughter of Egypt shall be confounded; she shall be delivered into the hand of the people of the north—(הַבִּשָּׁה בְּתִימָצְרִים נִתְנָה בְּיַד עַמּוֹצְפּוֹן) The verb hovishshah (confounded/ashamed) denotes humiliation and disappointment of false hope. Bat Mitsrayim (daughter of Egypt) personifies the nation as a woman stripped of dignity, nittenah (delivered/given) into enemy hands.

This verse fulfills Ezekiel's contemporary prophecy (Ezekiel 29-32) and reverses Egypt's self-image as regional superpower. The passive construction nittenah emphasizes divine agency—God actively delivers Egypt to Babylon. The phrase am tsafon (people of the north) became shorthand for Babylonian forces, whose repeated invasions traumatized Judah and Egypt alike.

Historical Context

Egypt prided itself as the ancient world's most stable civilization, ruling for millennia with minimal foreign invasion. Nebuchadnezzar's 568 BC campaign shattered this image. The "north" consistently represents threat in Jeremiah, as Mesopotamian armies approached via the Fertile Crescent.

Study Questions

1. What does Egypt's humiliation teach about national pride and self-sufficiency before God?
2. How does the personification of Egypt as a shamed woman intensify the prophetic message?
3. When have you experienced being "delivered into the hand" of consequences you thought you could avoid?
