

Jeremiah 46:7

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Who is this that cometh up as a flood, whose waters are moved as the rivers?

Analysis

Who is this that cometh up as a flood (מִי־זֶה בֹּאֵר יַעֲלֶה)—The interrogative introduces poetic imagery mocking Egypt's imperial arrogance. Ye'or (יַאֲרִ) specifically designates the Nile River, Egypt's lifeblood and symbol of national power. The simile compares Egypt's military expansion to the Nile's annual inundation—seemingly unstoppable, life-giving to Egypt, overwhelming to others.

Whose waters are moved as the rivers—The verb yitga'ashu (יִתְגַּעְשׁוּ) means 'surge' or 'toss violently,' describing turbulent floodwaters. Egypt's military campaigns rolled forth like floodwaters—chaotic, powerful, apparently irresistible. Yet this rhetorical question anticipates v. 8's answer, then v. 9-12's devastating reversal. Like Pharaoh before the Red Sea, Egypt's 'flood' will drown them.

Historical Context

The Nile's annual flood was central to Egyptian civilization, religion, and self-understanding. Pharaohs were considered divine guarantors of the inundation. Using this imagery, Jeremiah targets Egypt's foundational national pride—their god-like power to bless or destroy. Yet Yahweh controls even the Nile (Exodus 7:17-21).

Study Questions

1. How does the Nile imagery expose the fundamental idolatry underlying Egyptian national confidence?
2. Why is it significant that God mocks Egypt using their own religious symbol (the Nile flood)?
3. What 'floods' of human power appear unstoppable today, yet remain under God's sovereign control?
