

Jeremiah 48:19

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

O inhabitant of Aroer, stand by the way, and espy; ask him that fleeth, and her that escapeth, and say, What is done?

Analysis

O inhabitant of Aroer, stand by the way, and espy —(וְיַשְׁבֵת עַרְוֹעֵר עַמְדֵי־צָרָר וְצָפֵי) Aroer, on the Arnon River gorge, commanded the main southern route into Moab. Jeremiah tells residents to stand (imdi) and watch (tsapi, keep vigil). Ask him that fleeth, and her that escapeth, and say, What is done? —שְׁאָלֵי נָס וְגַמְלָטָה אַמְרֵי מָה —(נְהִיבָתָה) —Survivors streaming past will report the catastrophe.

The scene evokes refugees fleeing disaster, their testimony confirming prophetic warnings. This pattern appears when Lot's family fled Sodom (Genesis 19), when Israel fled Egypt (Exodus 14), and when disciples will flee end-times judgment (Matthew 24:16-20). The question 'What is done?' acknowledges the incomprehensible scale of destruction—events so catastrophic they require eyewitness testimony to believe.

Historical Context

Aroer (modern Arair) sat on the northern rim of the Arnon gorge, the natural border between Moab and Israel (Deuteronomy 2:36). As a border fortress on the major north-south trade route, Aroer would be among the first cities to witness refugees fleeing Babylon's invasion from the north. The city's strategic location made it an ideal observation point for the unfolding catastrophe.

1. When have you witnessed or heard testimony about God's judgment that initially seemed unbelievable?
2. How should hearing others' 'escape stories' from sin's consequences affect your own responsiveness to warning?
3. What is our responsibility as 'watchers' to warn others of coming judgment while there is still time to flee?
