

Jeremiah 49:18

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

As in the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah and the neighbour cities thereof, saith the LORD, no man shall abide there, neither shall a son of man dwell in it.

Analysis

As in the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah (כִּמְהַפְּכָת סָדָם וְעֹמֶרֶת, k'mahpekat Sedom v'Amorah)—The comparison is devastating: Edom's judgment will be as total and irreversible as the paradigmatic divine catastrophe. The noun mahpekah (overthrow) denotes violent reversal, used throughout Scripture for supernatural destruction (Genesis 19:29, Amos 4:11).

No man shall abide there, neither shall a son of man dwell in it—The parallelism emphasizes absolute desolation. Unlike other judged nations that were later restored, Edom receives Sodom's fate: permanent uninhabitability. This severity reflects Edom's covenant treachery—they were Esau's descendants who sold birthright for stew and later sold out their brothers for plunder. Hebrews 12:16-17 warns against Esau's irreversible loss; Edom corporately embodies this cautionary tale.

Historical Context

Sodom and Gomorrah (Genesis 19) stood in collective memory as the ultimate example of divine wrath. Archaeological evidence shows Edom's major cities were indeed abandoned and never substantially re inhabited after the 6th century BC, unlike other nations Babylon conquered.

Study Questions

1. Why does Scripture invoke Sodom when describing ultimate judgment—what makes that destruction paradigmatic?
2. How does Edom's permanent desolation differ from God's restoration of Judah, and what does this reveal about covenant?
3. What does the 'son of man shall not dwell' formula teach about the relationship between human habitation and divine blessing?
