

Jeremiah 49:30

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Flee, get you far off, dwell deep, O ye inhabitants of Hazor, saith the LORD; for Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon hath taken counsel against you, and hath conceived a purpose against you.

Analysis

Flee, get you far off, dwell deep, O ye inhabitants of Hazor (גֹּזֹעַ גָּדוּ מָאֹד הַעֲמִיקָה) — Three urgent imperatives: flee (nus), wander far (nud), dwell deep/hidden (amaq). God Himself warns Hazor to seek maximum distance and concealment. This isn't permission to escape judgment but recognition of Babylon's overwhelming threat. Even God's warning underscores sovereignty—He controls both attackers and defenders.

For Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon hath taken counsel against you (כִּי־יעָצָ) — Babylon has ya'ats (deliberated, planned). But behind Nebuchadnezzar's strategy lies God's atzah (counsel, v. 20). Human war councils unknowingly execute divine decrees. And hath conceived a purpose against you (כִּי־שָׁב עַלְיכֶם מִתְּשִׁבָּה) — the 'thought' becomes effective plan. Resistance is futile; only flight offers temporary respite.

Historical Context

Nebuchadnezzar's Arabian campaigns (599-598 BC) were strategically motivated—controlling trade routes, securing borders, acquiring resources. His 'counsel' involved military planning, intelligence gathering, and logistical preparation. Yet Jeremiah reveals the theological dimension: God moves behind human strategy.

Study Questions

1. Why would God warn people to flee if their judgment is divinely ordained?
2. What does the layering of human counsel (Nebuchadnezzar's) and divine counsel (God's) teach about sovereignty and secondary causes?
3. How should Christians respond when God allows (or decrees) calamity—is flight appropriate or faithless?
