

Jeremiah 5:26

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For among my people are found wicked men: they lay wait, as he that setteth snares; they set a trap, they catch men.

Analysis

God exposes social injustice: 'For among my people are found wicked men' (kî-nimṣē'û ḥē'ammî rēšā'îm, כִּי-נִמְשְׁעוּ הֶעָמִי רִשְׁעִים). The term 'my people' intensifies the tragedy—those called to be holy harbor wickedness. The metaphor 'they lay wait, as he that setteth snares' compares evildoers to hunters trapping prey: 'they set a trap, they catch men' (yāšîḇû mašḥîṭ 'ānāšîm yilkōḏû). This vivid imagery depicts deliberate, calculated exploitation—the wealthy and powerful systematically oppressing the vulnerable. The Hebrew māšḥîṭ (trap, snare) emphasizes premeditation. These aren't accidental injustices but planned schemes to enrich themselves at others' expense. This social sin violates covenant requirements to protect the vulnerable (Exodus 22:21-27, Deuteronomy 24:14-15) and provokes divine judgment as severely as idolatry.

Historical Context

Jeremiah's ministry coincided with severe social stratification in Judah. The wealthy accumulated land by fraud and debt slavery (Isaiah 5:8, Micah 2:1-2), courts favored the rich (Amos 5:12), and the poor faced systematic exploitation. Archaeological evidence from this period shows concentration of wealth in Jerusalem while rural areas impoverished. This violated Torah's economic protections—sabbath years, jubilee, gleaning rights, interest prohibitions—designed to prevent permanent underclass formation. Prophets consistently condemned social injustice alongside idolatry (Isaiah 1:17, 23; Amos 2:6-7; Micah 6:8). Jesus later addressed similar issues, denouncing religious leaders who 'devoured widows' houses' (Mark 12:40). The principle remains: true faith produces justice; religion without righteousness is hypocrisy.
