

Jeremiah 7:16

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Therefore pray not thou for this people, neither lift up cry nor prayer for them, neither make intercession to me: for I will not hear thee.

Analysis

God forbids Jeremiah to intercede: 'Therefore pray not thou for this people, neither lift up cry nor prayer for them, neither make intercession to me: for I will not hear thee.' This stunning command indicates that judgment is now fixed and irreversible. The comprehensive prohibition ('pray not,' 'lift up cry,' 'make intercession') emphasizes finality. God's statement 'I will not hear' shows that the time for repentance has passed. This illustrates that divine patience, though extensive, has limits. When persistent rejection continues despite repeated warnings, God eventually confirms people in their chosen rebellion. Reformed theology speaks of judicial hardening—God's active giving over of persistent rebels to their sin's consequences.

Historical Context

This command appears multiple times in Jeremiah (7:16; 11:14; 14:11), indicating that during his later ministry, judgment was sealed. Even Moses and Samuel couldn't intercede successfully at this point (Jeremiah 15:1).
