

Jeremiah 8:13

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

I will surely consume them, saith the LORD: there shall be no grapes on the vine, nor figs on the fig tree, and the leaf shall fade; and the things that I have given them shall pass away from them.

Analysis

This verse uses harvest imagery to announce judgment: 'I will surely consume them, saith the LORD.' The Hebrew asoph asiph (אָסַף אָסִיפָה) uses an emphatic verbal construction—'I will utterly gather them away/consume them.' The agricultural imagery follows: 'there shall be no grapes on the vine, nor figs on the fig tree, and the leaf shall fade.' Vines and figs represent covenant blessing (1 Kings 4:25, Micah 4:4); their failure signals covenant curse (Deuteronomy 28:38-40). 'And the things that I have given them shall pass away from them' indicates loss of all God had provided—land, produce, prosperity, even national existence. The verse may anticipate Jesus' cursing of the barren fig tree (Matthew 21:18-19), symbolizing fruitless Israel's judgment.

Historical Context

Viticulture and fig cultivation were central to Judah's agricultural economy. Archaeological evidence shows extensive terraced vineyards and orcharding throughout the Judean hill country. The vine and fig tree symbolized prosperity and security. Their destruction represented complete economic collapse—exactly what occurred during Babylon's invasions when agricultural infrastructure was devastated. The theme of fruitless Israel appears throughout the prophets (Isaiah 5:1-7, Hosea 9:10) and into Jesus' ministry.

Study Questions

1. How does spiritual fruitlessness invite divine judgment, and what constitutes genuine spiritual fruit?
2. What warning does this verse offer to those who enjoy God's blessings without producing corresponding faithfulness?
