

Jeremiah 9:12

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Who is the wise man, that may understand this? and who is he to whom the mouth of the LORD hath spoken, that he may declare it, for what the land perisheth and is burned up like a wilderness, that none passeth through?

Analysis

This verse poses a wisdom question: 'Who is the wise man, that may understand this?' The Hebrew chakam (חָקָם, wise) and yavin (יָבַן, understand, discern) challenge those claiming wisdom to explain the situation. 'And who is he to whom the mouth of the LORD hath spoken, that he may declare it?' Questions both sages and prophets—who can explain why the land is ruined? 'For what the land perisheth and is burned up like a wilderness, that none passeth through?' The question's urgency reflects the theological crisis: how could YHWH's land, YHWH's people, YHWH's city face such devastation? Only divine revelation can answer—human wisdom fails to comprehend God's ways in judgment.

Historical Context

This verse may address the exilic community's theological confusion. How could God allow His temple's destruction? Where was His promised protection? Ancient Near Eastern peoples expected their gods to defend their temples; YHWH's 'failure' required explanation. The answer comes in verses 13-14: covenant violation explains divine judgment. This theological processing during exile produced much of the Hebrew Bible's final form.

Study Questions

1. Why does understanding God's judgment require divine revelation rather than merely human wisdom?
2. How does the question's form—searching for someone wise enough to understand—expose the limits of unaided human reasoning about God's ways?
