

Job 1:15

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And the Sabeans fell upon them, and took them away; yea, they have slain the servants with the edge of the sword; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

Analysis

The Chaldean attack parallels the Sabeans raid, showing that evil comes from multiple sources but under one sovereign purpose. The 'three bands' indicates organized, military-style coordination. The repeated pattern—attack, slaughter of servants, one messenger—reveals God's sovereign ordering even in catastrophic events. The loss of the camels represented Job's transportation and trade capacity, compounding his economic devastation.

Historical Context

The Chaldeans (proto-Babylonians) were semi-nomadic peoples known for raiding and warfare. Their targeting of camels reflects their value in ancient trade and transportation networks.
