

Job 14:5

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Seeing his days are determined, the number of his months are with thee, thou hast appointed his bounds that he cannot pass;

Analysis

'Seeing his days are determined, the number of his months are with thee, thou hast appointed his bounds that he cannot pass.' Job affirms divine sovereignty over lifespan: days are 'determined' (חֲרוּצִים, charutsim—decided, decreed), months numbered, 'bounds' (חֻק, chuq—statute, limit) 'appointed' (עָשָׂה, asita—made). This echoes Psalm 139:16 and Acts 17:26. If God sovereignly determines our days, why judge us for sins committed in that predetermined timeframe? Job isn't denying human responsibility but highlighting the mystery of divine sovereignty and human accountability coexisting. The Reformed tradition embraces this mystery (Westminster Confession 3.1), affirming both without explaining how they fit together.

Historical Context

Ancient peoples recognized life's brevity and generally attributed it to divine control. Job here uses this common belief to question God's justice in strictly judging creatures whose days God Himself limited.
