

Job 20:22

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

In the fulness of his sufficiency he shall be in straits: every hand of the wicked shall come upon him.

Analysis

Prosperity brings judgment: 'In the fulness of his sufficiency he shall be in straits: every hand of the wicked shall come upon him.' At the peak of prosperity, trouble strikes—the Hebrew 'metsuqah' (straits/distress) suggests being trapped. 'Every hand' attacking suggests comprehensive assault. This describes sudden reversal, which did happen to Job—but not because of wickedness. Satan's attack, not divine judgment for sin, caused Job's reversal.

Historical Context

Ancient Near Eastern texts recognized that prosperity could precede downfall (Daniel's interpretation of Belshazzar's feast). However, assuming all sudden reversals indicate prior wickedness oversimplifies divine providence. Job's story explicitly shows righteous suffering.
