

Job 21:5

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Mark me, and be astonished, and lay your hand upon your mouth.

Analysis

Mark me, and be astonished (פְּנֵה-עָלַי וְהָשָׁמוּ, penu-elay vehashamu)—The verb panah (פָּנָה) means to turn or face, demanding undivided attention. Shamem (שָׁמֵם) conveys horror, devastation, or appalled shock. Job isn't asking for sympathy but for his friends to confront the reality that will shatter their theology.

Lay your hand upon your mouth—This gesture signifies stunned silence (Judges 18:19, Micah 7:16). Job's coming argument about wicked prosperity will be so overwhelming that honest observers must fall silent. The phrase anticipates God's eventual rebuke of the friends (42:7) and foreshadows Job's own response when God speaks from the whirlwind (40:4). Wisdom begins when human explanations cease and we acknowledge mystery beyond our comprehension.

Historical Context

Ancient Near Eastern wisdom emphasized observable patterns—righteous actions produce blessing, wickedness brings curse. Job's argument that observable reality contradicts this pattern constituted a radical challenge. The gesture of covering the mouth appears in contexts of divine revelation overwhelming human understanding (Isaiah 52:15). Job's friends claimed to speak for God, but Job predicts they'll be silenced by facts.

Study Questions

1. When has observable reality challenged your theological assumptions? How did you respond?
2. What does the gesture of covering the mouth teach about proper humility before mysteries we cannot solve?
3. How can we distinguish between legitimate questions that challenge faulty theology versus doubt that undermines faith?
