

Job 22:24

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Then shalt thou lay up gold as dust, and the gold of Ophir as the stones of the brooks.

Analysis

Then shalt thou lay up gold as dust—Eliphaz promises that repentance will bring prosperity where gold becomes as common as aphan (עֲפָן, dust/dirt). The gold of Ophir as the stones of the brooks references Ophir, famed for the finest gold (1 Kings 9:28, 10:11), suggesting it will become as abundant as river pebbles. The Hebrew betsir (בְּצִיר, rock/ore) may indicate gold ore found in streambeds.

Eliphaz preaches a retribution theology: righteousness guarantees material prosperity, suffering proves sin. This 'prosperity gospel' framework collapses under Job's case—his suffering stemmed not from sin but from divine testing (1:8). While Scripture affirms that wisdom often leads to blessing (Proverbs), it also reveals a suffering Servant who enriches others through poverty (Isaiah 53, 2 Corinthians 8:9). Jesus warned against storing up earthly treasures (Matthew 6:19-21), redefining prosperity in kingdom terms.

Historical Context

Ophir's location remains disputed—possibly in Arabia, India, or East Africa—but it was renowned throughout the ancient world for exceptional gold quality. Solomon's fleet brought 420 talents from Ophir (1 Kings 9:28). Eliphaz's promise reflects Ancient Near Eastern wisdom's common equation of righteousness with prosperity, a theology thoroughly examined and nuanced in Job's narrative.
