

Job 22:30

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

He shall deliver the island of the innocent: and it is delivered by the pureness of thine hands.

Analysis

Eliphaz concludes: 'He shall deliver the island of the innocent: and it is delivered by the pureness of thine hands.' This final conditional assumes repentance will restore Job. The irony is that Job needs no repentance - he is already innocent. False diagnosis leads to false cure.

Historical Context

Ancient Near Eastern wisdom emphasized repentance as pathway to restoration. Eliphaz's counsel contains truth but misapplies it to someone who isn't guilty as charged.
