

Job 23:11

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

My foot hath held his steps, his way have I kept, and not declined.

Analysis

My foot hath held his steps (בְּאַשּׁוּרוֹ אַחַזָּה רַגְלִי, ba'ashuro achazah ragli)—Achaz (held fast, seized) describes tenacious grip. The ashur (step, path) represents God's prescribed way for righteous living. Job claims his regel (foot) firmly gripped the divine path, suggesting careful, deliberate obedience rather than casual religiosity. This echoes Psalm 17:5: 'Hold up my goings in thy paths, that my footsteps slip not.'

His way have I kept, and not declined (דִּרְכּוֹ שָׁמַרְתִּי וְלֹא־נָטַחְתִּי, darko shamarti v'lo-at)—Derek (way, path) refers to God's moral direction. Shamar (keep, guard, observe) implies vigilant preservation, the same verb used for keeping God's commandments. Natah (decline, turn aside) means deviation or wandering. Job asserts unwavering fidelity—he neither abandoned God's way nor drifted from it through negligence. This self-testimony isn't self-righteousness but appeals to covenant integrity, knowing God Himself witnesses truthfulness (Job 1:8).

Historical Context

This declaration comes after Job's friends repeatedly insist that suffering proves hidden sin. Job's appeal to his own integrity would seem arrogant except that the prologue reveals God Himself commended Job's righteousness (1:8, 2:3). In ancient covenant culture, oath-taking and self-testimony carried weight when backed by witnesses. Job essentially puts himself under oath, inviting divine judgment if his claim proves false.
