

Job 24:17

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For the morning is to them even as the shadow of death: if one know them, they are in the terrors of the shadow of death.

Analysis

For the morning is to them even as the shadow of death—Job employs powerful irony: while normal people dread darkness, the wicked fear daylight. "Morning" (boqer, בֹּקֶר) typically symbolizes deliverance and divine favor (Psalm 30:5, "weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning"). But for evildoers, dawn brings "the shadow of death" (tsalmaveth, צֶלְמָוֶת), the same term describing deep darkness and mortal danger (Psalm 23:4). Their moral inversion is complete.

If one know them, they are in the terrors of the shadow of death—Exposure terrifies the wicked more than death itself. "Know them" (יָכִיר) means recognition or identification—if their identity is discovered, they experience ballahot tsalmaveth (בַּלְהוֹת צֶלְמָוֶת), the "terrors of death-shadow." This anticipates Jesus's teaching that "there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed" (Luke 12:2). Yet Job's frustration remains: Why doesn't God expose and judge now?

Historical Context

The "shadow of death" appears frequently in wisdom literature and psalms, often describing life-threatening danger or deepest darkness. Job's use here inverts typical symbolism: the wicked fear light that exposes rather than darkness that threatens. This reflects the moral chaos Job perceives in a world where retribution seems absent.

Study Questions

1. How does the wicked person's fear of exposure ('morning is to them even as the shadow of death') reveal the psychological torment of hidden sin?
2. What does the moral inversion—fearing light, loving darkness—teach about sin's deforming power on human nature?
3. How does Christ's promise that all secrets will be revealed (Luke 12:2-3) both warn the wicked and comfort the oppressed?
