

Job 24:25

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And if it be not so now, who will make me a liar, and make my speech nothing worth?

Analysis

Job challenges anyone to disprove his observations: "And if it be not so now, who will make me a liar, and make my speech nothing worth?" The conditional "if not so" questions his arguments' validity. The verb kazav (כָּזַב, "make me a liar") means to prove false or deceptive. The phrase "make my speech nothing worth" uses al-belima (אַל-לִבְלִימָה), meaning futility or worthlessness. Job stakes his credibility on empirical observation: the wicked often prosper while the righteous suffer. From a Reformed perspective, this demonstrates intellectual honesty in theology—faith must engage reality, not deny it. Job's willingness to be proven wrong shows genuine pursuit of truth rather than defense of position. This anticipates the Berean spirit (Acts 17:11) of examining Scripture to verify claims. Yet Job's challenge will ultimately be answered not by refuting his observations but by God revealing purposes transcending simple retribution. Truth involves both accurate observation and theological interpretation.

Historical Context

Ancient wisdom discourse involved challenges to debate and prove claims (similar to Job 13:22, where Job challenges God to debate). Intellectual rigor and evidence-based reasoning weren't foreign to ancient thought. However, Job's speeches show tension between empirical observation (what we see) and theological tradition (what we've been taught). This tension persists in all generations when experience seems to contradict doctrine.

Related Passages

John 3:16 — God's love and salvation

Ephesians 2:8 — Salvation by grace through faith

Study Questions

1. How should Christians balance intellectual honesty about troubling observations with faith in God's goodness?
2. What does Job's willingness to be proven wrong teach about genuine pursuit of truth?
3. How do we distinguish between observations that challenge false theology versus those that challenge true faith?

Interlinear Text

וְאִם	לֹא	אֵפֹא	אֲנִי	יֹכְזֵיבִי	וְנִשְׁמַע	לֹא
H518	H3808		H4310
		And if it be not so now		me a liar	and make	nothing worth
		H645		H3576	H7760	H408

מִלְתִּי:
my speech
H4405

Additional Cross-References

Job 9:24 (Parallel theme): The earth is given into the hand of the wicked: he covereth the faces of the judges thereof; if not, where, and who is he?