

Job 29:7

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

When I went out to the gate through the city, when I prepared my seat in the street!

Analysis

Job recalls his former honor: "When I went out to the gate through the city, when I prepared my seat in the street!" The noun sha'ar (שַׁעַר, "gate") was where elders sat to judge cases and conduct business. The verb kun (כּוּן, "prepared") means to establish or set firmly. Job describes his position of authority and respect in civic life. The city gate was where justice was administered (Ruth 4:1-11, Deuteronomy 21:19). From a Reformed perspective, Job's reminiscence reveals proper Christian ambition—seeking positions where one can serve others and administer justice. Job didn't seek status for selfish gain but to "deliver the poor that cried, and the fatherless" (verse 12). This models cultural engagement: believers should pursue influence not for self-exaltation but to establish justice and defend the vulnerable. Christ's teaching on greatness through service (Mark 10:43-45) fulfills this principle.

Historical Context

Ancient Near Eastern cities had gates where legal proceedings occurred, trade was conducted, and community decisions made. Sitting at the gate indicated leadership and judicial authority. Lot sat in Sodom's gate (Genesis 19:1), suggesting civic position. Job's seat at the gate demonstrated his integration into society's structures for redemptive purposes—he didn't withdraw but engaged to promote justice.

Study Questions

1. How does Job's example of holding civic authority for justice sake inform Christian cultural engagement?
2. What is the proper Christian motivation for seeking positions of influence and leadership?
3. How do we balance Christ's teaching on servant leadership with Job's description of civic authority?
