

Job 34:12

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Yea, surely God will not do wickedly, neither will the Almighty pervert judgment.

Analysis

Elihu emphasizes: 'Yea, surely God will not do wickedly, neither will the Almighty pervert judgment.' The double negative ('not do wickedly... neither pervert') underscores absolute divine justice. Yet this doesn't explain innocent suffering - it just asserts impossibility of divine injustice.

Historical Context

Ancient Near Eastern justice concepts required divine judges to be perfectly fair. Elihu's assertion is theologically correct but pastorally insufficient.
