

Job 36:10

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

He openeth also their ear to discipline, and commandeth that they return from iniquity.

Analysis

---

He openeth also their ear to discipline—The phrase יָגַל אָזְנָם (yigel oznam, "He opens their ear") depicts making the deaf hear—God removes spiritual deafness that prevents learning. The word מוֹסָר (musar, "discipline/instruction") appears 50 times in Proverbs, always denoting corrective teaching that shapes character. God's discipline isn't vindictive punishment but educational correction.

And commandeth that they return from iniquity uses וַיֹּאמֶר (wayyomer, "He commands/says") with יָשׁוּבוּן מֵעָוֹן (yeshuvun me-aven, "they should return from iniquity"). The verb שׁוּב (shuv, "return/repent") is Scripture's primary repentance term—turning 180 degrees from sin toward God. Affliction's purpose is repentance: God opens deaf ears, reveals hidden sin (v.9), then commands turning away from evil. This three-step process—awareness, conviction, repentance—describes biblical conversion and ongoing sanctification.

Historical Context

Ancient pedagogy relied heavily on physical discipline (Proverbs 13:24, 23:13-14). Elihu applies this educational model theologically: God uses suffering as corrective discipline for spiritual formation. Unlike pagan concepts of arbitrary divine wrath, covenant theology presents suffering as purposeful education. This revolutionized understanding of adversity—not cosmic bad luck or divine caprice, but loving correction. The NT develops this fully in Hebrews 12:7-11, explaining that God disciplines all His children for their ultimate good.

Study Questions

1. What spiritual disciplines has God used to 'open your ear' to correction you previously couldn't hear?
2. How does understanding suffering as God's command to 'return from iniquity' change your perspective on current trials?
3. In what areas of your life might you be spiritually 'deaf' to God's discipline right now?
