

Job 36:14

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

They die in youth, and their life is among the unclean.

Analysis

They die in youth (יָמֹתוֹ בַּנְּעָר, yamuthu ba-no'ar)—Elihu describes the fate of the wicked who reject God's discipline. The Hebrew no'ar means 'youth' or 'prime of life,' indicating premature death before natural old age. This echoes the covenant curse in Deuteronomy 28:20-22 where rebellion brings untimely death.

Their life is among the unclean (וּמִתְחַם בְּקִדְשִׁים, v'chayyatam baq'deshim)—The shocking phrase qedeshim literally means 'holy ones' but refers ironically to male cult prostitutes at pagan shrines. The same word appears in Deuteronomy 23:17 and 1 Kings 14:24. Elihu warns that those who persist in sin end their lives in the most degrading circumstances, dying among temple prostitutes rather than in honored old age. This represents complete moral and social degradation—the opposite of Job's righteous life. The parallel construction suggests divine judgment removes the impenitent before their time, and their death occurs in shame rather than dignity.

Historical Context

Elihu, the youngest of Job's counselors, speaks in chapters 32-37 with a different tone than the three friends. Writing during the patriarchal period (c. 2000-1800 BC), the text assumes familiarity with Canaanite cult prostitution, a persistent temptation for Israel throughout the Old Testament era. The qedeshim served at fertility shrines, engaging in ritualized sexual acts believed to ensure agricultural prosperity.

Study Questions

1. How does premature death serve as both natural consequence and divine judgment for persistent sin?
2. In what ways does modern culture normalize spiritual 'prostitution'—giving ourselves to false gods for material or sensual benefits?
3. How should the warning of dying in disgrace motivate us to embrace God's discipline when it comes?
