

Job 38:32

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Canst thou bring forth Mazzaroth in his season? or canst thou guide Arcturus with his sons?

Analysis

---

God challenges Job with astronomical phenomena beyond human control. 'Mazzaroth' (mazzarot, מַזְרָוֹת) likely refers to the constellations or zodiac in their seasons, though the exact meaning is debated. 'Arcturus with his sons' refers to the constellation Ursa Major (the Great Bear) with its associated stars. The verbs 'bring forth' (yatsa, יָצָא) and 'guide' (nachah, נָחָה) emphasize active direction and leading, asking whether Job can command the heavenly bodies to appear and move according to divine schedule. This verse reveals God's governance of celestial mechanics with implications for His sovereignty over time itself—seasons, years, and ages all move at His command. The stars that ancient cultures worshiped as deities are merely obedient servants of Yahweh. This cosmic perspective humbles human pretensions to wisdom while establishing that the God who controls the universe is trustworthy to govern individual lives, even when we cannot understand His purposes.

Historical Context

---

Ancient astronomical observation was highly developed in Mesopotamia and Egypt, where star charts and zodiacal systems were used for timekeeping, agriculture, and astrology. God's reference to these constellations asserts His authority over what pagan cultures considered divine powers. The biblical witness consistently affirms that celestial bodies are created servants, not gods (Psalm 148:3-6, Isaiah 40:26).

Related Passages

---

John 15:13 — Greatest form of love

1 Corinthians 13:4 — Characteristics of love

Study Questions

---

1. How does God's sovereignty over the cosmos affect your confidence in His governance of your life's details?
2. What modern equivalents to ancient astrology do you trust more than God's providence?
3. How does the vastness of creation that God governs inspire both humility and trust in His care for you personally?

Interlinear Text

---

הֲתֵצֵא יָא	מַזָּרֹת	בְּעֵת וֹ	אֲשֶׁר יֵשׁ	עַל	בְּנֵי יְהוָה
Canst thou bring forth	Mazzaroth	in his season	Arcturus	H5921	with his sons
H3318	H4216	H6256	H5906		H1121
תְּנַחֵם:
or canst thou guide
H5148					