

Job 4:19

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

How much less in them that dwell in houses of clay, whose foundation is in the dust, which are crushed before the moth?

Analysis

---

Eliphaz continues: 'How much less in them that dwell in houses of clay, whose foundation is in the dust, which are crushed before the moth?' The 'houses of clay' refers to human bodies (2 Corinthians 5:1). Eliphaz argues from lesser to greater: if angels can fall, how much more humans! The moth comparison suggests humans are crushed as easily as moths. This is true anthropology—humans are frail—but false soteriology—it denies that God's power preserves His elect.

Historical Context

The body as a clay house appears throughout ancient Near Eastern wisdom literature, emphasizing human mortality and frailty. Eliphaz uses this common imagery to argue for universal human guilt deserving judgment.

Related Passages

Revelation 20:12 — Judgment according to deeds

Romans 2:1 — Judging others

Study Questions

---

1. How do you balance biblical anthropology (human frailty) with biblical soteriology (God's preserving grace)?

2. What does it mean that God chooses to preserve those who dwell in 'houses of clay'?
