

Job 5:25

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Thou shalt know also that thy seed shall be great, and thine offspring as the grass of the earth.

Analysis

Eliphaz promises: 'Thou shalt know also that thy seed shall be great, and thine offspring as the grass of the earth.' Numerous descendants represented divine blessing (Genesis 15:5). For Job, who has lost all ten children, this promise of future children is particularly painful. Eliphaz implies Job can have a new family if he repents, treating Job's deceased children as replaceable and their deaths as deserved. This reveals profound pastoral insensitivity and theological error.

Historical Context

Numerous offspring was considered the primary sign of divine blessing in ancient Near Eastern culture. Eliphaz's promise of future children follows conventional blessing formulas but cruelly ignores Job's devastating loss.
