

Job 8:5

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

If thou wouldest seek unto God betimes, and make thy supplication to the Almighty;

Analysis

Bildad's counsel 'if thou wouldest seek unto God betimes, and make thy supplication to the Almighty' assumes Job hasn't already done so. The conditional 'if' adds insult to injury, implying Job's prayerlessness caused his calamity. Well-meaning advice becomes cruelty when it misunderstands the situation.

Historical Context

Wisdom literature emphasizes seeking God, but Bildad's timing reveals insensitivity. His advice, though containing truth, exemplifies speaking the right words at the wrong time (Proverbs 25:11).
