

John 1:11

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

He came unto his own, and his own received him not.

Analysis

The rejection narrows from world to 'his own' (ta idia)—His own property, His own people Israel. The Jewish nation, prepared through centuries of revelation, prophecy, and covenant relationship, 'received him not' (ou parelabon). The verb 'paralambano' means to take, receive, or accept—Israel refused to welcome their own Messiah. This is the supreme tragedy of the incarnation: those most prepared to recognize Him proved most resistant. Familiarity bred contempt; religious pride blinded eyes that should have seen.

Historical Context

Israel had every advantage: the Scriptures, the prophets, the temple, the covenants. They were looking for Messiah, yet when He came, they rejected Him. Jesus came to Nazareth, His hometown, and they tried to kill Him (Luke 4:29). He came to Jerusalem, and the religious leaders conspired against Him. The very specificity of Old Testament prophecy was turned against them—expecting a conquering king, they rejected the suffering servant.
