

John 10:27

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me:

Analysis

Jesus describes His sheep with three characteristics: 'hear my voice' (τεս φωνής μου ακούοουσιν), 'I know them' (καγο γινοσκο αυτα), and 'they follow me' (ακολουθούσιν μοι). Hearing Christ's voice indicates spiritual perception and receptivity - not merely auditory hearing but responsive listening. The verb ginosko (know) indicates intimate, experiential knowledge, not mere recognition. Jesus' knowledge of His sheep is personal and relational. The sheep's response is following - akoloutheo suggests discipleship, continuous accompaniment, and imitation. This threefold description identifies genuine disciples: they recognize Christ's voice, are known intimately by Him, and follow in obedience. The order is significant: hearing enables recognition of the Shepherd, which leads to following. The relationship is reciprocal: the sheep hear and follow; the Shepherd knows and leads.

Historical Context

In Palestinian shepherding, sheep learned to recognize their shepherd's distinctive call. Multiple flocks might water at the same well, but each flock responded to its own shepherd's voice. Jesus uses this familiar imagery to describe spiritual recognition - His sheep discern His voice among competing claims. The discourse addresses the question posed in 10:24: 'How long dost thou make us to doubt? If thou be the Christ, tell us plainly.' Jesus responds that His sheep recognize Him through His works and words. Jewish leaders rejected Jesus despite evidence, proving they were not His sheep. Early Christian catechesis used this passage to describe conversion: hearing the Gospel, being known by Christ, and following in discipleship. Reformation theology emphasized that effective calling involves hearing Christ's voice through the Spirit's internal testimony.

Study Questions

1. What enables some to hear and recognize Christ's voice while others do not?
2. How does Christ's knowing His sheep differ from mere intellectual awareness?
