

John 11:10

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But if a man walk in the night, he stumbleth, because there is no light in him.

Analysis

The contrast between day and night walking continues the metaphor. Night represents walking outside God's will or living in spiritual darkness. Without 'the light of this world' (Christ Himself, 8:12), one stumbles morally and spiritually. The physical imagery points to spiritual truth: those who reject Christ walk in darkness regardless of physical circumstances. This anticipates the disciples' later failure when they fled in Christ's arrest—walking in fear's darkness rather than faith's light.

Historical Context

Night travel was dangerous in first-century Palestine due to rough terrain, bandits, and wild animals. Lamps provided insufficient light for safe travel, making the metaphor immediately understandable.
