

John 11:5

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Now Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus.

Analysis

John carefully documents Jesus' love for all three siblings, establishing the personal nature of His relationships. The Greek 'agapao' denotes divine, covenant love, not merely emotional affection. This love makes His delay (v. 6) more mysterious, teaching that divine love operates according to perfect wisdom, not human expectations. Christ's love does not guarantee immediate relief but ultimate good.

Historical Context

The mention of all three family members suggests their prominence in the early church. Martha and Mary represent different temperaments both beloved by Christ, affirming diverse personalities in Christian community.
