

John 12:10

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But the chief priests consulted that they might put Lazarus also to death;

Analysis

The chief priests plot to kill Lazarus too, demonstrating how sin escalates. Not satisfied with planning Jesus' death, they target the evidence—Lazarus himself. This reveals the depth of their hardness: they prefer murder to belief. Their logic is perverse: eliminate the witness rather than accept the truth. This demonstrates that rejection of evidence isn't merely intellectual but moral—they suppress truth in unrighteousness (Rom 1:18). Their plot against Lazarus shows that persecution extends beyond Christ to His witnesses.

Historical Context

The Sanhedrin had authority to order executions in certain cases, though Roman oversight was required. Lazarus posed no criminal threat, making any plot purely religious persecution.

Study Questions

1. What does the plot against Lazarus teach about hardened hearts suppressing evidence?
2. How does this demonstrate that persecution targets not just Christ but His witnesses?
3. In what ways do people today attempt to 'kill' inconvenient testimony?
