

John 12:40

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their heart; that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their heart, and be converted, and I should heal them.

Analysis

John quotes Isaiah 6:10, describing divine blinding and hardening that prevents conversion and healing. God actively blinds eyes and hardens hearts as judgment on persistent rebellion. The 'lest' clauses show God prevents their conversion, raising the mystery of divine election. This isn't arbitrary cruelty but righteous judgment: they wouldn't see, so God ensures they can't see. The hardening makes permanent their chosen rebellion. This demonstrates that salvation requires divine initiative; human will alone cannot produce faith. Only those whom God heals can be converted.

Historical Context

Isaiah 6 records the prophet's commission to preach to those whom God had already judicially hardened. This same pattern applies to Jesus' ministry—many heard but few believed.

Study Questions

---

1. How does divine hardening demonstrate God's righteous judgment on persistent unbelief?
2. What does this teach about the necessity of divine grace for salvation?
3. In what ways does this text challenge Arminian free will theology?
