

John 16:26

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

At that day ye shall ask in my name: and I say not unto you, that I will pray the Father for you:

Analysis

At that day ye shall ask in my name (ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐκείνῃ ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου αἰτήσετε)—Jesus points forward to Pentecost and the new covenant era when believers would pray directly to the Father through Christ's mediatorial work. The phrase en tō onomati mou (in my name) means far more than invoking a formula; it means praying on the basis of Christ's person, work, and authority, as those united to Him.

I say not unto you, that I will pray the Father for you—This doesn't mean Christ ceases interceding (He remains our advocate, 1 John 2:1; Hebrews 7:25), but that His finished work opens direct access to the Father. Believers need not approach God through earthly mediators; Christ's once-for-all sacrifice grants boldness to enter the holiest (Hebrews 10:19-22). The Father's love for believers, rooted in His love for the Son, makes their prayers welcome.

Historical Context

This occurs in the Upper Room Discourse (John 13-17), hours before Jesus's arrest. The disciples were accustomed to Jewish prayer patterns—synagogue prayers, Temple rituals, and scribal mediation. Jesus announces a radical shift: post-resurrection prayer would be characterized by direct access to the Father through the Son's name. The phrase "at that day" refers to the coming of the Spirit at Pentecost (Acts 2), when the church age would begin and believers would experience unprecedented intimacy with God.

Study Questions

1. What does it mean to pray "in Jesus's name"—is it merely a closing formula, or does it involve praying according to His character, will, and authority?
2. How does Christ's finished work change our confidence in approaching God compared to Old Testament believers?
3. In what ways does this verse balance Christ's ongoing intercession with our direct access to the Father?
