

John 2:5

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

His mother saith unto the servants, Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it.

Analysis

Mary's instruction to the servants—'Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it'—expresses complete trust despite Jesus' initial response. This is her last recorded statement in the Gospels, and it perfectly summarizes the proper response to Christ: unconditional obedience. She doesn't know what He will do but trusts He will act appropriately. This becomes a paradigm for discipleship: hear and obey, regardless of understanding.

Historical Context

Mary had treasured prophetic words about Jesus for thirty years (Luke 2:19, 51). Her confidence in Him despite no previous public miracles reflects deep faith. Her words echo Joseph's servants' instructions in Egypt (Genesis 41:55), establishing a new exodus pattern where Jesus provides what is needed.
