

John 20:6

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Then cometh Simon Peter following him, and went into the sepulchre, and seeth the linen clothes lie,

Analysis

Then cometh Simon Peter following him—Peter arrives second but went into the sepulchre (εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον, eisēlthen eis to mnēmeion) immediately, characteristically bold. The verb's aorist tense emphasizes decisive action contrasting John's hesitation. And seeth the linen clothes lie (θεωρεῖ τὰ ὀθόνια κείμενα, theōrei ta othonia keimena)—John uses a different verb for Peter's seeing: θεωρεῖ (theōrei), suggesting more careful observation than mere glancing.

Peter's entering first despite arriving second inverts expected order, previewing the resurrection's pattern of reversals. The grave clothes 'lying' (κείμενα, keimena)—present participle suggesting they lie undisturbed, not scattered as if unwrapped hastily. This detail becomes crucial: the body hadn't been stolen (thieves don't unwrap corpses), nor had Jesus merely revived (he wouldn't carefully remove wrappings).

Historical Context

Peter's leadership role in the early church (Acts 1-12) was already established when John wrote, making this account of Peter entering first theologically significant—the church's chief apostle is first to fully witness the empty tomb's evidence. Peter's boldness here contrasts with his earlier denials (18:17, 25-27), showing restoration already beginning even before the explicit reconciliation of chapter 21.
