

John 3:8

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit.

Analysis

Jesus uses wind as an analogy for the Spirit's work: 'The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit.' The same Greek word 'pneuma' means both wind and spirit. The analogy emphasizes sovereign unpredictability—we experience the Spirit's effects without controlling or fully understanding His movements. Regeneration is real but mysterious.

Historical Context

Wind imagery for God's Spirit appears in the Old Testament (Ezekiel 37:9, Genesis 1:2). Jesus teaches that the Spirit works sovereignly—not according to human expectation or manipulation. Effects are observable (changed lives) even when the mechanism remains mysterious. This humbles human pretension to control spiritual realities.

Study Questions

---

1. How does the wind analogy humble human attempts to control or predict God's work?
2. What 'effects' of the Spirit's work have you observed in your own life or others'?
