

John 4:18

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For thou hast had five husbands; and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband: in that saidst thou truly.

Analysis

Jesus' revelation of her five husbands and current cohabitation demonstrates divine omniscience and prophetic insight. This knowledge serves pastoral purpose—not to shame but to awaken consciousness of sin and need for forgiveness. The phrase 'in that saidst thou truly' shows Christ values honesty, even when it reveals failure.

Historical Context

While five marriages seems extreme, possibilities include death, desertion, and divorce. Her current relationship outside marriage compounded her social marginalization, explaining her isolated water-drawing at noon.
