

John 8:10

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

When Jesus had lifted up himself, and saw none but the woman, he said unto her, Woman, where are those thine accusers? hath no man condemned thee?

Analysis

Jesus asks, 'Where are those thine accusers? hath no man condemned thee?' This question emphasizes the absence of qualified judges. Human accusers fled before their own guilt, leaving only Christ - who has right to condemn but chooses to save. This moment pictures the gospel: the only righteous Judge offers pardon, not punishment.

Historical Context

Without accusers present and with Roman restriction on Jewish capital punishment, the legal case dissolved. But Jesus' question addresses deeper reality - the absence of any human qualified to condemn.

Study Questions

1. What does it mean that Christ, the only qualified judge, chooses mercy?

2. How does understanding your own guilt before God affect how you treat others?
3. Why does Jesus ask about her accusers rather than immediately pronouncing forgiveness?
