

John 8:15

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Ye judge after the flesh; I judge no man.

Analysis

Jesus contrasts the Pharisees' fleshly judgment with His refusal to judge according to appearances. 'After the flesh' means by external, human standards - reputation, position, ethnicity, wealth. Christ judges by spiritual reality, discerning hearts. When He does judge (v. 16), His judgment is true because it's shared with the Father. This establishes righteous judgment's standard.

Historical Context

Jewish religious authorities judged by Pharisaic tradition, ritual observance, and ethnic identity - external standards. Jesus consistently challenged these superficial measures of righteousness.
