

Joshua 1:18

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Whosoever he be that doth rebel against thy commandment, and will not hearken unto thy words in all that thou commandest him, he shall be put to death: only be strong and of a good courage.

Analysis

The tribes declare capital punishment for rebellion: 'Whosoever...doth rebel...shall be put to death' (kol-ish asher-yamreh...yumat, כָּל־אִישׁ אֲשֶׁר־יִמְרֹה־יָמוּת). This severe penalty emphasizes military discipline's necessity during conquest. The phrase 'rebel against thy commandment' (yamreh et-picha, יִמְרֹה אֶת־פִּיךָ) literally means 'rebels against thy mouth'—refusing orders. Their closing encouragement 'only be strong and of a good courage' (raq chazaq ve'emats, רַק חֲזָאק וְאַמָּץ) echoes God's threefold command to Joshua (verses 6, 7, 9), showing they recognize his need for divine courage. From a Reformed perspective, this demonstrates that authority carries responsibility requiring divine enablement, and submission includes encouraging leaders toward faithfulness.

Historical Context

Ancient Near Eastern military discipline required harsh penalties for insubordination—armies without discipline faced defeat. Israel's tribal confederation needed strong unity for successful conquest. The death penalty for rebellion wasn't tyranny but military necessity. Later, Achan's rebellion (chapter 7) brought judgment demonstrating this wasn't empty threat. The tribes' encouragement to Joshua shows healthy relationship between leader and followers—mutual accountability and encouragement.
