

Joshua 24:29

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And it came to pass after these things, that Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of the LORD, died, being an hundred and ten years old.

Analysis

And it came to pass after these things, that Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of the LORD, died, being an hundred and ten years old—Joshua's epitaph: the servant of the LORD (eved YHWH, עֵד יְהָוָה). This title, previously Moses' alone (Joshua 1:1), now crowns Joshua. He dies at 110, the same ideal lifespan as Joseph (Genesis 50:26), suggesting divine favor.

Servant of the LORD is the highest commendation. Not 'mighty warrior' or 'great conqueror'—his identity was servanthood. Jesus embodied this perfectly (Philippians 2:7), and believers aspire to it (Revelation 22:3). Faithful service, not spectacular achievement, defines kingdom greatness (Matthew 20:26-28).

Historical Context

Joshua served approximately 45 years: 40 under Moses' leadership and 5-7 leading the conquest and settlement. His 110-year lifespan paralleled Joseph's, connecting Israel's entry into Canaan with their exodus from Egypt. Both men served as deliverers bringing God's people to promised rest.
