

Joshua 4:6

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

That this may be a sign among you, that when your children ask their fathers in time to come, saying, What mean ye by these stones?

Analysis

The memorial stones' purpose—"That this may be a sign among you, that when your children ask their fathers in time to come, saying, What mean ye by these stones?"—creates teaching opportunities for future generations. Physical memorials prompt questions enabling gospel transmission. The anticipation that children will ask demonstrates intentional catechesis structure. Faith transmission requires not merely information download but dialogue responding to curiosity. Visible reminders of God's works spark conversations passing faith to the next generation.

Historical Context

The twelve stones (one per tribe) erected at Gilgal created permanent memorial of Jordan crossing. Joshua also placed twelve stones in Jordan's riverbed (verse 9), creating dual witness. Gilgal became Israel's base camp during conquest, making the memorial strategically located. Similar memorials appear throughout Scripture (Genesis 28:18-22, 35:14; 1 Samuel 7:12), showing physical reminders help maintain spiritual memory. Modern church architecture and liturgy similarly incorporate memorial elements.
