

Joshua 6:17

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And the city shall be accursed, even it, and all that are therein, to the LORD: only Rahab the harlot shall live, she and all that are with her in the house, because she hid the messengers that we sent.

Analysis

The herem (devoted to destruction) command—'And the city shall be accursed, even it, and all that are therein, to the LORD: only Rahab the harlot shall live'—required total destruction except Rahab's family. The term 'accursed' (Hebrew herem) means devoted exclusively to God, requiring either consecration or destruction. Jericho's wealth went to God's treasury, not Israel's pockets. This demonstrates that holy war served divine judgment, not human profit. Rahab's exception shows mercy within judgment—grace rescues believers from deserved wrath.

Historical Context

The herem command appears throughout conquest narratives, requiring complete destruction of certain cities. This served multiple purposes: divine judgment on Canaanite sin (Deuteronomy 9:5), preventing idolatrous influence (Deuteronomy 7:1-5), and demonstrating that conquest served God's purposes, not mere land-grabbing. Modern readers struggle with these accounts, but understanding them as God's holy judgment on sinful nations (similar to Noah's flood) helps. Rahab's salvation demonstrates that even under judgment, God saves those who believe.
