

Judges 8:13

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And Gideon the son of Joash returned from battle before the sun was up,

Analysis

And Gideon the son of Joash returned from battle before the sun was up—

The Hebrew phrase mima'aleh heheres (מִמַּעַלְה הֶהָרֵס) literally means "from the ascent of Heres" or "before the sun." This marks Gideon's swift return from pursuing the Midianite kings Zebah and Zalmunna across the Jordan. The timing emphasizes his military efficiency and determination—he didn't delay to celebrate victory but immediately returned to settle accounts with the Israelite cities that refused aid.

This verse transitions from Gideon's divinely-ordained victory over Midian (chapters 6-7) to a troubling sequence of personal vengeance. While pursuing God's enemies was righteous, Gideon now turns his fury against fellow Israelites who failed to support him. The phrase shub (שׁוּב, "returned") suggests purposeful intent—this wasn't a casual journey home but a deliberate mission of retribution. The context reveals a shift from Spirit-empowered deliverance to flesh-driven vindictiveness, foreshadowing Gideon's later failures (the ephod, polygamy, and his son Abimelech's tyranny).

Reformed interpretation sees here the danger of mixing divine calling with personal agenda. Gideon's early career demonstrated radical faith (reducing his army from 32,000 to 300, Judges 7:2-7); his later actions reveal how quickly spiritual victory can breed carnal pride. This pattern warns believers that seasons of God's blessing may expose hidden pride more dangerously than seasons of trial (Deuteronomy 8:11-17, 1 Corinthians 10:12).

Historical Context

The geography indicates Gideon pursued the Midianite kings eastward across the Jordan River into the wilderness regions of Transjordan, then returned westward. The 'ascent of Heres' likely refers to a mountain pass or the rising sun marking direction. Ancient warfare often involved long-distance pursuits to prevent regrouping—Gideon's 300 men chased a massive Midianite coalition army to ensure complete victory. The timing 'before the sun was up' suggests either an all-night return march or departure at dawn, demonstrating military discipline and urgency in an era before standing professional armies.
