

Lamentations 3:59

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

O LORD, thou hast seen my wrong: judge thou my cause.

Analysis

O LORD, thou hast seen my wrong: judge thou my cause (רָאִיתָהּ יְהוָה עֲוֹנֹתַי) 'Thou hast seen' (ra'itah) appeals to God as witness. 'My wrong' (avatati) is the injustice done to me, my oppression. 'Judge thou my cause' (shoftah mishpati)—a legal appeal for vindication. Jeremiah appeals to the righteous Judge to vindicate him against false accusers. This is imprecatory prayer—not personal revenge but appeal to divine justice. It acknowledges that vengeance belongs to God (Deuteronomy 32:35; Romans 12:19), removing it from human hands while confidently expecting divine action.

Historical Context

Jeremiah faced constant opposition: beaten, imprisoned, mocked, plotted against by religious leaders and royalty alike (Jeremiah 20:1-2; 26:8-11; 37:15; 38:4-6). His vindication came not in his lifetime but in history's verdict—he was right, and Jerusalem fell exactly as he prophesied. Trusting God to judge meant relinquishing immediate vindication.

Study Questions

1. When wronged, do you trust God to judge your cause, or do you take vindication into your own hands through gossip, retaliation, or self-justification?
2. How does appealing to God as Judge free you from the burden of defending yourself and enable you to love even unjust accusers?
