

Luke 1:43

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And whence is this to me, that the mother of my Lord should come to me?

Analysis

Elisabeth's question 'whence is this to me, that the mother of my Lord should come to me?' expresses both humility and theological insight. Her recognition of Mary as 'mother of my Lord' demonstrates Holy Spirit-given understanding that Mary's child is the Lord (Greek 'Kurios'), the covenant name of God. Elisabeth's wonder at this honor echoes David's response when the ark came to him (2 Sam 6:9). She discerns not merely that Mary is pregnant, but that Mary carries the divine Messiah. This Spirit-illuminated recognition confirms to Mary that her conception is indeed of God. Elisabeth's humility models proper response to God's grace.

Historical Context

Elisabeth, as the older, pregnant woman and wife of a priest, held higher social status than young, newly pregnant Mary. Yet she immediately recognizes and defers to Mary's greater honor as mother of Messiah, showing spiritual maturity that transcends social convention.
