

Luke 1:74

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

That he would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies might serve him without fear,

Analysis

The purpose of salvation is 'that we being delivered from the hand of our enemies might serve him without fear.' The goal isn't merely deliverance for comfort but liberation for service. The phrase 'without fear' indicates freedom from both external threat and internal anxiety—complete security enabling wholehearted devotion. True worship requires freedom from bondage; we cannot properly serve God while enslaved to sin. This verse presents the Reformed ordo salutis pattern: deliverance precedes service, salvation enables obedience. We don't serve to be saved but are saved to serve. The emphasis on serving 'him' shows that salvation's ultimate purpose is God-centered, not self-centered.

Historical Context

Israel enslaved in Egypt couldn't worship freely; deliverance enabled them to serve God (Ex 7:16; 8:1). Similarly, spiritual deliverance from sin's bondage enables the fearless service and worship God desires. True freedom is found in serving God, not independence from Him.
